

Big Bash League

All Time Stats

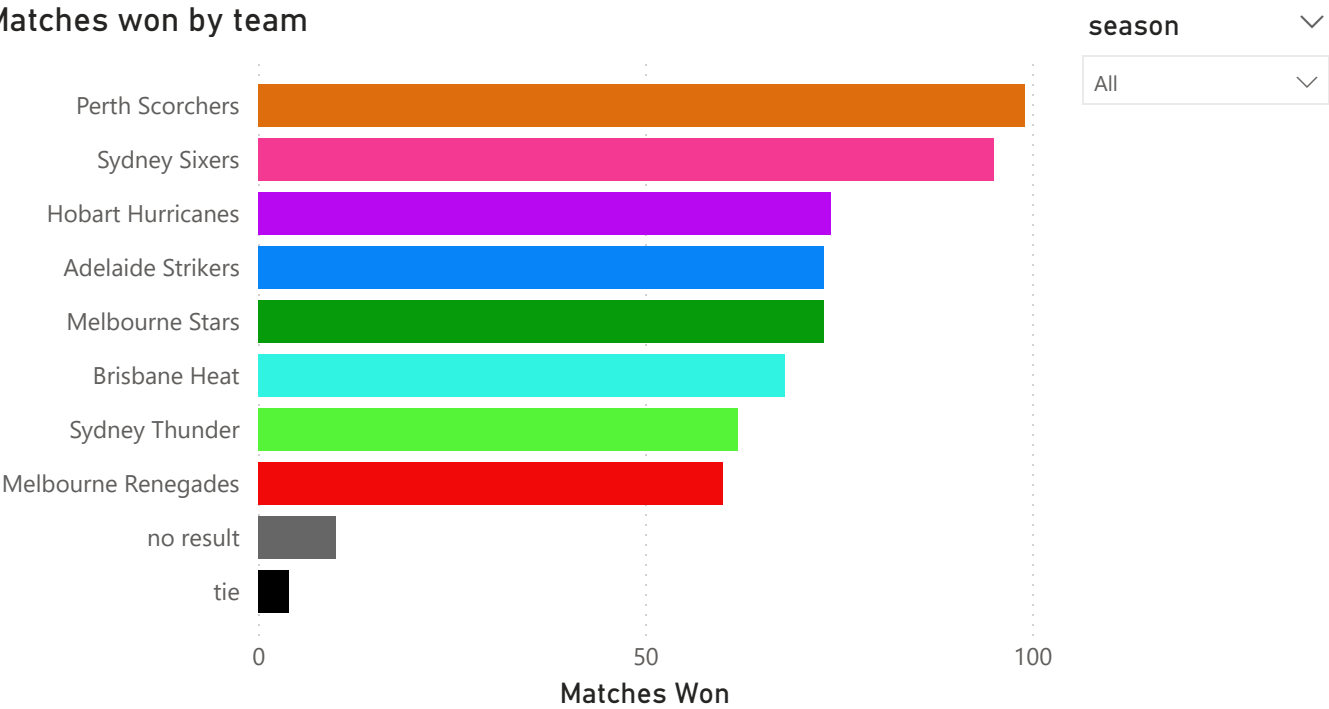

(2011/12 season through 2024/25 season)

All pages within this report feature a slicer in the top right corner to allow filtering by season.

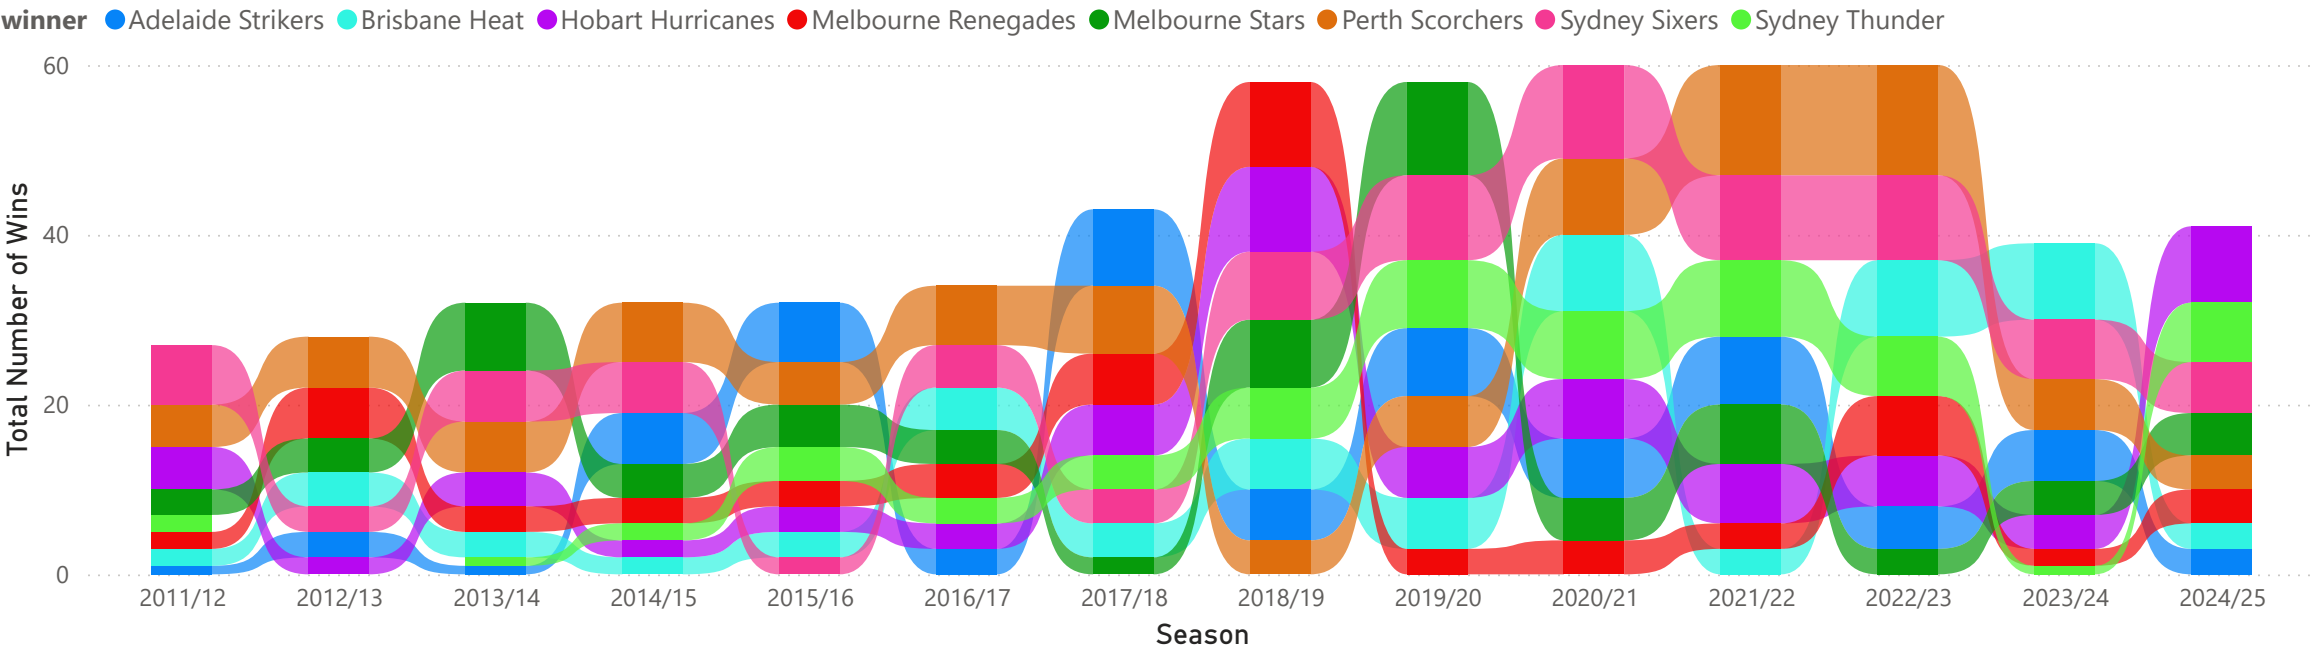

Right clicking on most data points provides a "drill through" option that jumps to a table showing the matches that make up that data point

This page displays total all time wins and wins per season for all teams within the Big Bash League (BBL).

Matches won by team

Team ranking of number of wins for each season

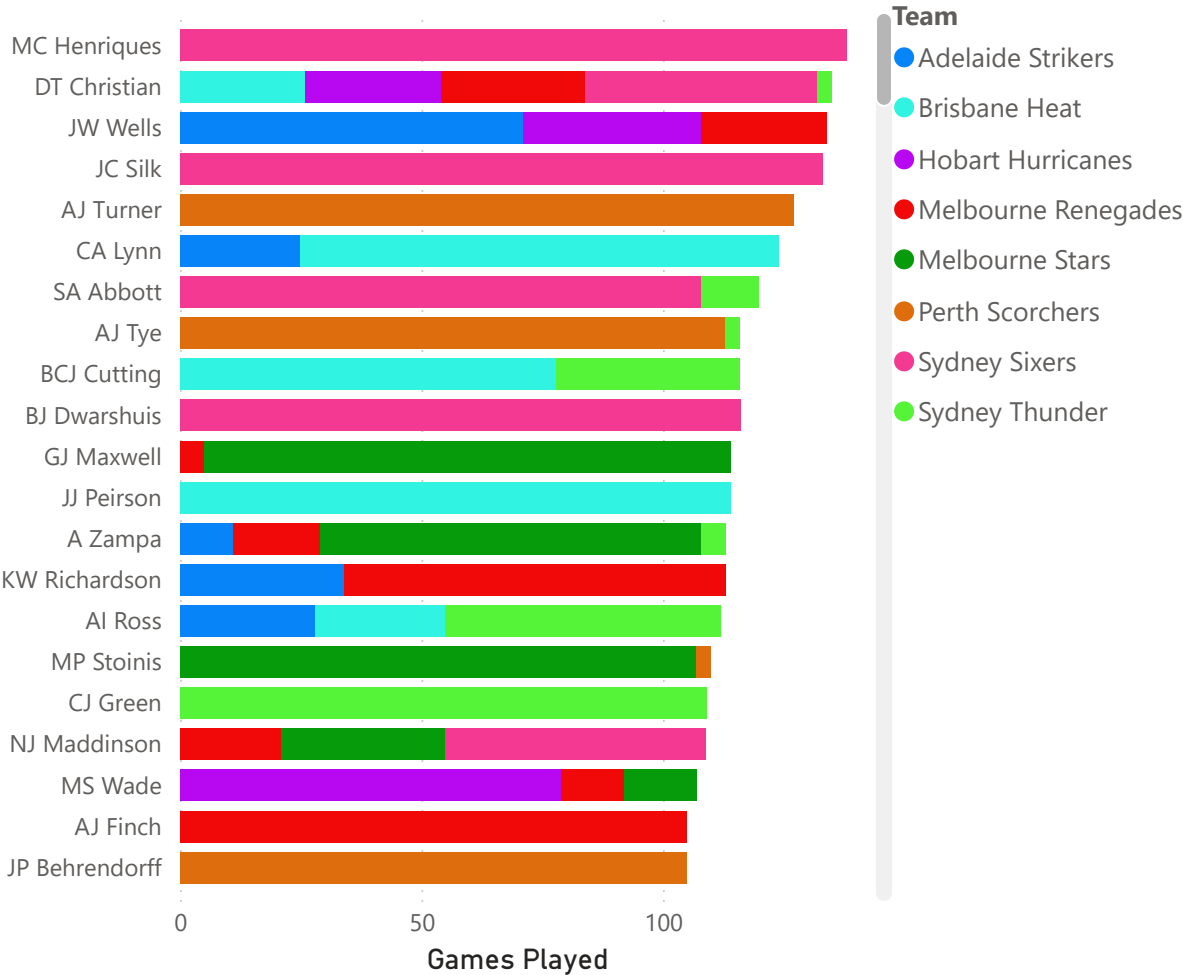

This page shows player information regarding how many matches each player played for a given team, how many player of the match awards a player won for a given team, and even how many times a player won the player of the match award and yet their team still lost.

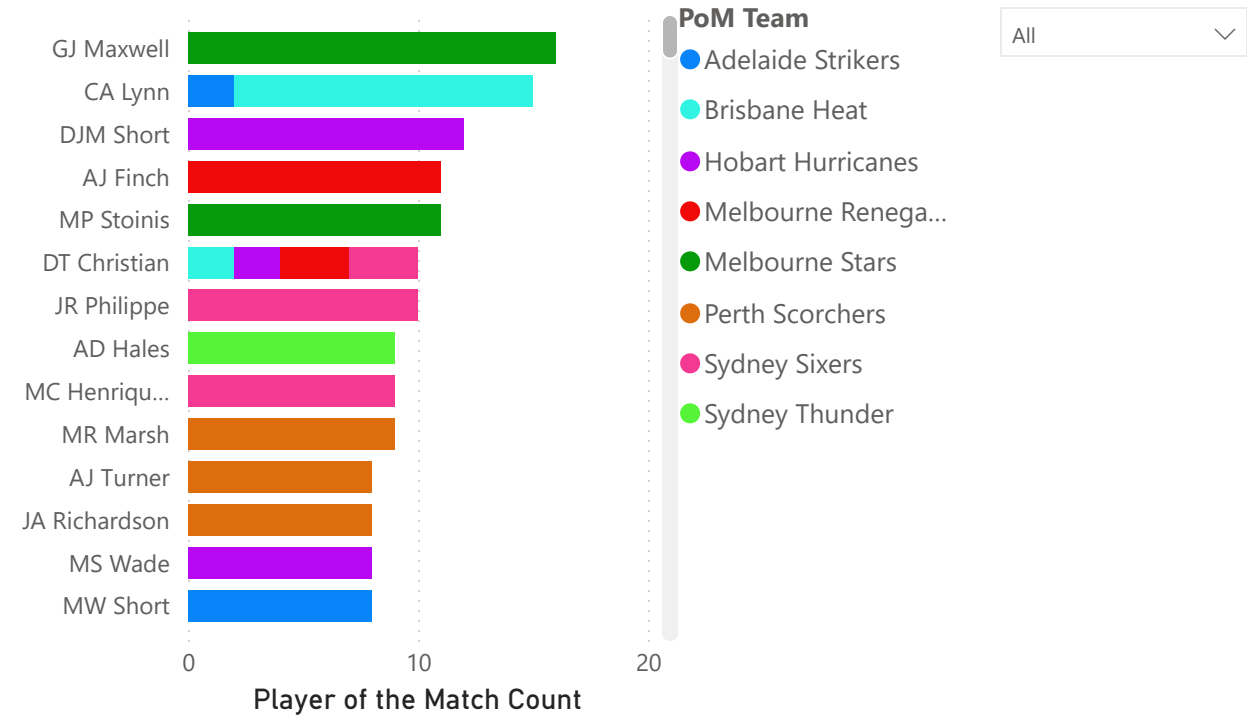

It isn't that surprising that Chris Lynn is the only player to win Player of the Match and still lose the game twice since he was basically carrying the Heat for several seasons.

It is interesting that the Sixers have the second most number of wins in the competition yet have four players who have won the player of the match while the Sixers still lost.

Home team toss decisions by season

Away team toss decisions by season

Count of Matches by venue and toss decision

This page shows toss decisions made by each home and away team across each season and shows the all time toss decisions for each venue.

Both home and away follow an overall trend (except for the away teams strongly preferring fielding in 2020/21).

Only Adelaide, the WACA, and Stadium Australia still have a higher percentage of teams batting first and that is mostly due to the earlier seasons where batting was preferred.

When applying the slicer to show only the last 5 seasons all of the grounds except for 3 of the smaller ones have higher fielding occurrences. Perth Stadium is the closest of the larger stadium, having an equal number batting and fielding.

This page shows team data regarding who the home and away team is, who won the toss, what the toss decision was, and who won as a result.

The donut chart to the right has "drill down" functionality to move through the above mentioned hierarchy. Selecting the double down arrow will move you through the general data across all teams whereas selecting the single down arrow and then clicking on a team will show you results filtered for that team.

For example, you can click on the Perth Scorchers for Home Team and the chart will show which team won the toss for all Scorchers home games.

Count of Match_id by Home_Team

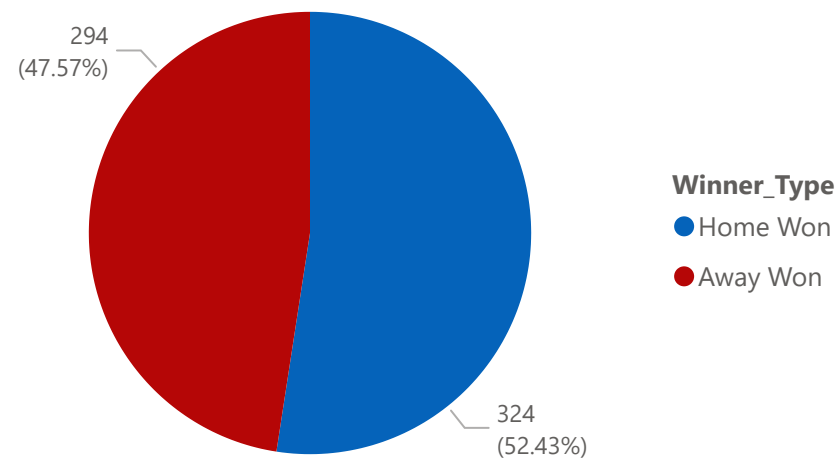

Using the donut chart, almost any scenario can be investigated and cross filtered with the other two graphs below.

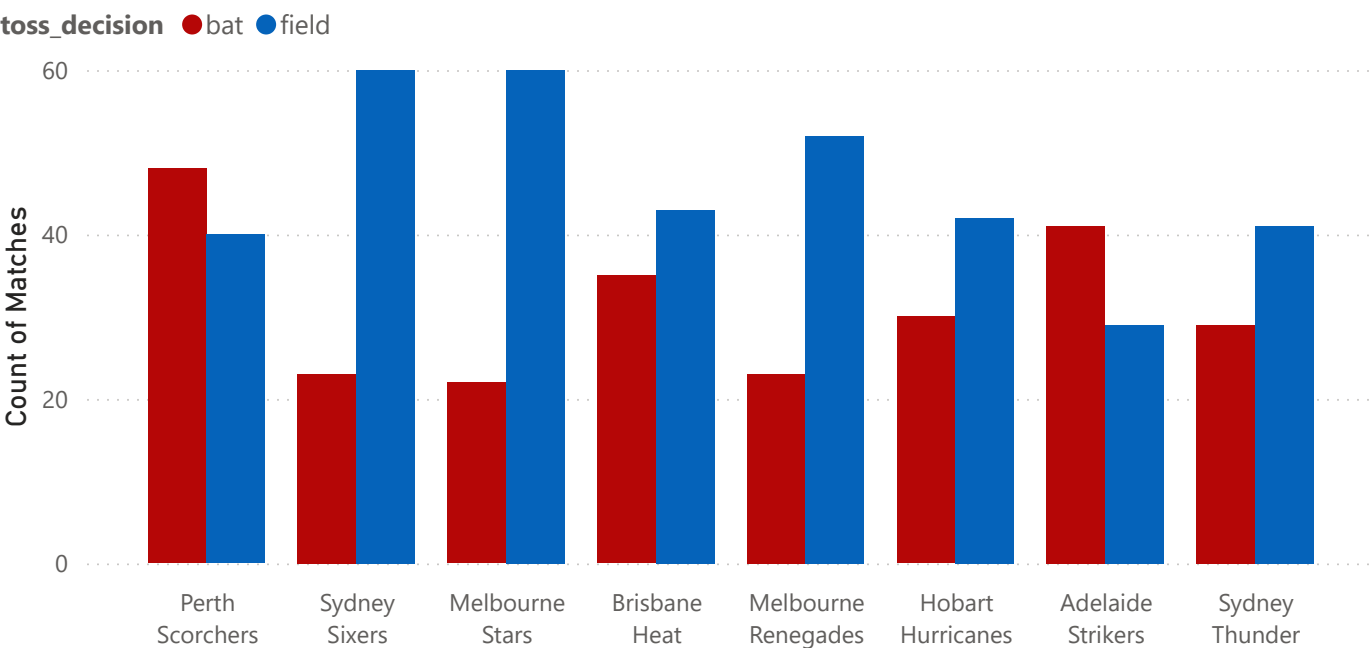

For example, the Scorchers, Strikers, and Hurricanes all win more at home while the Stars, Thunder, and Renegades have a pretty even home vs away record while the Sixers and the Heat have better records playing away.

The donut chart even allows for a prediction of sorts. If you are watching a game and know who the home and away team is, who won the toss, and what the decision was then you can see what outcomes have occurred in the past.
